FIREMEN BATTLED WITH THE FLAMES YESTERDAY MORNING

Big Apartment House Owned by John W. King on North Davie Damaged by Fire — Excellent Work Prevented Spread of Flames to Nearby Dwellings.

The firemen of the city were called out yesterday morning to fight what, but for the prompt and efficient work of the department, would have been a serious conflagration. As it is the loss from fire and water will amount to several thousand dollars.

The blaze was in the triple-apartment on North Davie street, owned by John W. King. The fire originated near the roof, presumably from the ignition of escaping gas, and when discovered the roof was well ablaze, the flames leaping high into the air. Half a dozen streams of water were being poured on the flames within a few minutes after the alarm and in less than half an hour the fire was almost extinguished. The entire roof was destroyed and a portion of the second story was gutted. Nearly all the furnishings in the building were removed, but all were damaged more or less from the fire and water.

The fire originated in the first apartment, occupied by the family of Max Temko. The middle apartment was vacant, while the third was occupied by Mr. King. His family were away at the time, being in Kinston on a visit. Willing hands helped the occupants to remove the furniture from the burning building. On the south of the building and separated by only a few feet is the residence of L. A. Andrew, but by good work this was not allowed to catch on fire. However, a goodly portion of Mr. Andrew's furniture was carried out as a precaution. On the north of the building is the residence of Phil Hawkins and while this also escaped the fury of the flames a portion of the furniture was removed as it looked as if the flames would spread.

The water pressure was excellent and the firemen placed the streams where the water would have the desired effect. As the fire was on the roof it was easy to get at and therefore the damage to the building is not so great. However, everything was drenched with water and the total loss to the building will be considerable. It is understood that Mr. King carried $6,000 insurance on the building and $1,000 on his household goods. It is believed that this will cover his loss. Mr. Temko's loss will amount to probably $2,000 as some of his furniture was burned and all the household belonging that were saved were drenched and mussed up considerably.

The block in which the fire occurred is thickly settled and had the water pressure been inadequate the entire block would have doubtless been at the mercy of the flames. Despite the fact that six streams of water were used the pressure remained around 70 pounds during the time the firemen were at work.

Society Battle Ended.

Special to Telegram.

Newport, R. I., July 25.—The battle for society leadership has ended after a fight of two weeks in the ranks of Mrs. Ogden Mills and Mrs. John R. Drexel. The cause of the cessation of hostilities is a secret, but one story has it that the menfolk declared that their business associations were becomning endangered by the social bickerings of their wives and that it must stop.

Will Fight Requisition.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, July 25.—In spite of the fact that Governor Kitchin has formally honored the requisition of the Governor of Georgia for Miller E. Starling, who is wanted in Quitman county, Ga., to answer the charge of forgery, there is to be a strenuous fight against the return of the young man to the "Cracker" State, the resistance to take the form of an application for writ of habeas corpus to be made to Associate Justice W. R. Allen, of the Supreme Court. Starling is a native of Wayne county and lived one while in Raleigh. In Georgia he went to trucking and contracted debts that he left unpaid, giving rise to the charge of forgery to the amount of about $2,300. Starlings friends are to undertake to prove that he is insane and prevent his extradition in this way.

BEATTIE

Promised to Elope on Night of Murder Declares Binford Girl.

Special to Telegram.

Richmond, Va., July 25.—Beulah Binford, the young girl with whom Henry Clay Beattie was involved, confessed today that the banker's son promised her last Tuesday night that he would elope with her. It was on Tuesday night that Mrs. Beattie was mysteriously shot to death while riding with her husband. Statements made tonight by the police and Prosecutor Wendenburg indicate that they have now enough evidence in hand to make them sure of their case, and the main part of this evidence is the girl's confession in which she declared that Beattie said to her last Tuesday "I have got to live with Louise as long as the old man lives, but when he dies—say, kid, we will go away from here together, and while we may not be able to get married we will take a chance."

The police say that the "old man" referred to is Mr. Owen, father of the murdered woman. Mr. Owen is here from Baltimore to assist in the prosecution.

Today's developments have convinced the authorities that the Binford girl has much to tell regarding her relations with Beattie and it is the plan tonight to place her in another place of confinement in hope she will break down and tell the secret of her past. For almost an hour today Prosecutor Wendenburg and Officer Shearer were in conference with Mr. and Mrs. Paul Beattie at the jail. Mr. Shearer came away wearing a smile. A stranger was taken to the jail this evening and after confronting Henry Clay Beattie and Paul Beattie the detective gave out a statement that what the stranger says fits in with the theory found by the police.

One of Beulah Binford's diaries was found today. Its pages are full of sentimental thoughts, addressed to "Henry, Dear Kid" and the last page contains items of furniture selected to go to house keeping. She says in a note to Henry, "You may visit me without anyone knowing anything about it."

The defense has a score of men working for every scrap of evidence that will strengthen the case. Beattie is still confident but refuses to discuss the case with anyone but his lawyers.

RUMORED THAT BALTIMORE MAN SUCCEEDS HILL

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 25.—Theodore Marburg, of Baltimore, is reported to have been chosen today by President Taft as ambassador to Germany. This report was in circulation at the state department, but no official confirmation could be obtained. If Mr. Marburg is chosen he will succeed David Jaynes Hill, now ambassador at Berlin.

Will Apply For Habeas Corpus Writ.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, July 25.—The Johnston county justice of the peace having ordered Alex A. Jernigan held without bail for the Superior court for the killing of Albert Todd two weeks ago at a fish pond near Wendell, preparations are afoot by his counsel for application for writ of habeas corpus which will be sought before Chief Justice Walter Clark on the ground that the circumstances of the killing do not warrant a refusal to accept bail in some reasonable amount. Death was from a knife wound across the chest. He died in a hospital here. Col. J. C. L. Harris is counsel for Jernigan.

WENT OVER NIAGARA FALLS IN STEEL BARREL.

Special to Telegram.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., July 25.—Bobby Leach made a trip over the horse shoe falls in a steel barrel this evening and lives to tell the tale of an experience more thrilling than any of his previous feats, which include several trips through the whirlpool rapids, balloon ascensions and a ride over the Senator Falls. Leach after going over the falls and when rescued said he had a successful trip. It was discovered however that he had broken his leg.

Water "Push Ball" a Picturesque Feature of the Larchmont Yacht Club's Carnival of Sports.

The members of the Larchmont Yacht club held a week of water sports, which were participated in by its men and women members, who are representatives of New York's select social circle. There were swimming and tub races and many amusing contests, including push ball and a canoe race where the contestants had to jump out and back to the crack of a pistol. The picture shows a game of push ball, which particular stunt furnished perhaps the most fun of the program.

ALASKA

Scandal Dropped Says Committeeman Burch, Who Wants to Know Why.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 25.—Why has the investigation into the Controller Bay scandal been dropped? This is what Representative Burch, of South Dakota, a Republican member of the committee tried to find out at a meeting of the committee today but he did not. He considered it strange, he said, that after starting out on the investigation, making a number of startling disclosures and summoning a number of prominent witnesses that the committee should be suddenly afflicted with "cold feet." He wanted to know why all witnesses were excused after detaining them for several weeks and the hearings postponed for several months. In answer Chairman Graham, of the committee, replied that anybody who would reflect upon the committee's work was unfriendly to its interests. He would not give Representative Burch a straight answer to his question and the inquiry was dropped.

The committee proceeded to hear testimony concerning the affairs of the White Earth Indian Reservation.

PROCEEDINGS IN LORIMER INVESTIGATION

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 25.—James Keeley, of the Chicago Tribune, told the Senate Lorimer committee that George O. Glavis, recently arrested on charge of embezzlement, was at his, Keeley's, request authorized to buy lobbyists' books which Glavis claimed would show that lobbyists paid Lorimer 25 per cent of the $2,000 fund in the fight made by the "Fireproof" magazine of Chicago for mail privileges.

Mr. Keeley said he had advanced Glavis $600 to come to Washington to dig up proof and present it to him. Glavis failed to deliver goods to Keeley. "I was simply stung that was all. This fellow Glavis who is brother of Louis Glavis, of Ballinger-Pinchot fame, is a beaut." The witness proceeded to tell of the arrest of Glavis and subsequent happenings. Asked if he would have published the story if he had gotten hold of it Mr. Keeley said he would.

WOOL

Tariff Revision Bill Discussed by Democratic Senators in Caucus.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 25.—A caucus of Democratic senators was called early today for tonight for the purpose of considering the wool tariff revision bill in the hopes of harmonizing the different factions of the party in order to have the bill voted through when it comes up Thursday. Instead of narrowing the breach it seems to be widening, LaFollette's bill being the bone of contention. It is understood that at the caucus tonight some of the Democrats made a proposal to compromise with LaFollette, fixing the duties on wool at 30 per cent. instead of 20 per cent. Others want the Senate to pass the original House bill without change.

The Democratic Senators must be thoroughly disorganized for at a late hour tonight they were still wrangling over the stand they should take on the wool revision bill.

WYSONG BOYS TOUR STATE ON WHEELS

Charlotte, July 25.—Forest and Paul Wysong, of Greensboro, spent last night at Thomas Arledge's on South Tryon street.

They are the champion young bicyclists of the State. They are taking a summer tour on their wheels, stopping wherever night finds them. They are related to Mrs. Arledge, the latter being a niece of their father.

The young cyclists left Greensboro Friday morning at 5:45 o'clock and covered the distance to Charlotte, 99 miles, according to the register of their wheels, by 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, after spending the night in Salisbury and losing some time on the road with punctured tires.

They left Charlotte this morning via Rozzell's ferry for Lincolnton and expect to reach Newton tonight and spend the night there. They expect to spend a short while in Morganton tomorrow and will go from there to Marion, where they will join their parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Wysong, of Greensboro, for a trip on the train to Montreat and other mountain resorts. They will not attempt to make the trip beyond Marion on their wheels.

The young men are 16 and 14 years of age, respectively.

And they are not only cyclists, but future aviators. They are building a flying machine. The machine is at the Wysong-Miles Company, Greensboro. Mr. Wysong encouraged them to try their skill on construction and if they succeed they may try their wings later. They each have an inventive turn of mind and are bright, clever chaps. They have the pluck to ride over difficulties if they cant' get around them. Mr. and Mrs. Wysong resided in Charlotte for some years. He was associated with Elliott & Marsh in the operation of the furniture factory. Mr. Wysong is an expert machinist and wood workman. His sons get their talent from him.

LINCOLN

Memorial Statue Will be Erected in Potomac Park.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 25.—Potomac Park was selected as the site most appropriate for the Lincoln Memorial statue, according to recommendations made today by the fine arts commission in session at the White House. The commission, of which President Taft is chairman, met at 3 o'clock. The exact location for the memorial was not definitely decided upon and until this is done the designer will not be selected. Two million dollars, the largest appropriation ever made by Congress for a similar purpose, is placed at the disposal of the commission for the erection of a statue to Abraham Lincoln.

FOUR DINNERS FOR TOGO IN WASHINGTON

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 25.—Admiral Togo, the hero of the battle of the Japan sea, will carry from Washington some ideas of the hospitality of the nation. He will have four dinners given in his honor, the first to be by President Taft on Saturday, August 5. The others are to follow. The Admiral is expected to arrive here on Thursday, August 3.

SPENCER MADE BIG GAINS IN VALUATIONS.

Special to Telegram.

Spencer, July 25.—The annual report of tax assessors for Rowan county made public today gives the county a total valuation of $11,109,338. This is an increase of $822,586 over any former valuation. The largest industrial development in Rowan is in Spencer, the valuation here being $6,183,150.

HOUSE

Ways and Means Committee Plans Sweeping Reduction of Cotton Schedule.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 25.—Chairman Underwood, of the Ways and Means committee, the Democratic floor leader of the House, is master of the situation respecting the plan of campaign of the Democrats at this session of Congress. Tonight at a meeting of the Democratic members of the House, Chairman Underwood's revision plan for making sweeping reductions in the tariff on cotton was upheld.

Representative Weber, of North Carolina, introduced a resolution which was voted down, providing that only reductions should be made in the tariff revised in respect to the duties on dyes, steel, iron. Representative Sisson, who also had a scheme providing for free trade, received only one vote in the caucus, that being cast by himself.

After a session lasting several hours, the policy planned by Chairman Underwood for reducing the duties on cotton goods was unanimously adopted by the caucus. In speaking to his Democratic colleagues, he said that the Democratic party in the House was on trial before the people of the country and that the cotton tariff must be carried through; that if the Senate would not listen to the demands of the House or not take up the bills passed by the Democratic majority the House ought to keep the Senate in session even until next December. They also caucused on a general legislative program.

The campaign publicity bill and the direct election bill were taken up before the cotton schedule discussion began. It was then that Underwood announced that these Democratic bills should be acted upon by the Senate at this session, if Congress had to be kept in session until December.

The Cotton Schedule.

Washington, July 25.—The bill revising the duties on the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill on the manufacturers of cotton goods was submitted today to a caucus of the Democratic members of the House by the Democratic members of the Ways and Means committee. It cuts the present duties about 40 per cent. and in some cases 100 per cent. Under the proposed rate the committee estimates that the imports for a year will be $29,000,000 as against $28,000,000 previously. The new duties will be $10,000,000 as against $13,000,000.

WILEY CASE NOW BEFORE THE PRESIDENT

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 25.—The Wiley case is at last squarely before President Taft, having been put there today by Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture. The President returned at 10 o'clock from Massachusetts and at 11 o'clock the cabinet met. Secretary Wilson handed his recommendations to the President and the case was informally discussed at the meeting. No action was taken. Later it was announced that President Taft would make known his opinion in the case within a few days.

Interest in Hookworm Campaign.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, July 25.—Dr. John A. Ferrell assistant secretary of the state board of health, in charge of the campaign for the elimination of hookworm disease says the physicians of the state are manifesting constantly increasing interest in the crusade against the disease. He is now receiving reports regularly from two thirds or more of them and fully half of them are using freely the state laboratory of hygiene for examinations and reports have come in from more than half of them showing cases, one to one hundred and more, treated. Furthermore numbers of them are active in the distribution of literature bearing on the hookworm disease and its cure and prevention.

Gates Had Comfortable Day.

Special to Telegram.

Paris, July 25.—John W. Gates passed a comfortable day, except for a slight restlessness resulting from the operation performed two weeks ago.

REPAIR YOUR ROADS AND PREVENT THEM FROM WASHING AWAY

This the Advise Given by Good Roads Expert at Lecture Yesterday Afternoon—Stitch in Time Saves Nine Shown to be Applicable to Road Building.

The good roads improvement train of the Southern Railway and the United States department of public roads spent yesterday afternoon in Greensboro and the demonstration cars were visited by a goodly number of people interested in good roads construction. Yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Bijou theatre, the use of which was donated for the occasion by the management, an illustrated lecture was given, only about 30 people taking advantage of the opportunity to learn more about good roads.

W. J. Hurlbert, of the Land and Industrial Department of the Southern Railway, was introduced by Secretary McLean, of the Chamber of Commerce, and he outlined the work of the railway and the government and the purpose of sending out the special train. The movement was purely educational, he said. He then introduced L. E. Boykin, of the Good Roads Office of the United States government, who lectures while his associate, H. S. Fairbanks, operated the machine. Mr. Boydkin stated that owing to the fact that Guilford's good roads are famous all over the country he would devote his time in impressing upon his hearers the necessity of keeping the roads repaired after they were built.

Upon the canvass were thrown slides showing fine roads, of macadam, gravel and sand clay that had been neglected and by reason of this fact were washed and going to the bad in every way. One road that cost $7,000 per mile had been neglected for seven years and a second view showed the condition of the road, it being in about the same condition that Summit avenue is in. The speaker pointed out the fact that a little work each year on this road would have prevented the waste of roadbed and money expended. He urged that the side ditches be kept clean and all minor holes in the road leveled and especially that the crown of the road be kept higher than the sides. For the leveling process the split-log drag was highly recommended as an inexpensive method of keeping the small holes filled.

Slides showing the process of mixing sand and clay were used, the first views being of a sand road, this being bad in dry weather but fine in wet weather, and the clay road, this being fine in dry weather but a mud puddle in wet weather. By mixing the sand and clay it makes an ideal road in all kinds of weather, said the speaker.

Some of the views were of roads so bad that many Guilford people would wonder at the thought that any people would allow such roads to remain in a community. However, this kind of road is rapidly being replaced by highways constructed in a modern manner and the special train is doing a great deal of good in educating people to the value of having the best roads obtainable.

On exhibition in the car are models of the various kinds of roads being built, the materials used being selected by the government after spending much time in experimenting with them. There is a model of a regular macadam road, a resurfaced macadam, three models of bituminous macadam, showing different methods of construction, brick road with concrete foundation, earth roads being improved with a split-log drag, sand clay road and gravel road. There is also a model of the best devised system of drainage in low places and along hillsides. One of the most interesting models is a steam roller at work packing a macadam road; also a working model of rock crusher at work at the base of a huge hill of rock.

The train goes to Asheboro today and will continue through the different counties in the State. It started in Mobile the first of May and will conclude the present trip in Richmond sometime in October.

THE UNDERWOOD BOOM FOR PRESIDENT.

The latest boom for the Democratic nomination for President to be introduced to the public is that of Congressman Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, Chairman of the House Ways and Means committee. It is said the Alabama delegation to the next National convention will be instructed for Underwood and that a strong fight for his nomination will be waged from this time until the candidate of the party is formally declared nominated. Congressman Underwood is one of the strong men on the Democratic side of the House and his great ability is being splendidly shown in the fight for tariff reform. It is acknowledged that his leadship of the Democrats during the extra session has been flawless and that he has manifested many of the characteristics of leadership as well as of statesmanship in the difficult position he has been filling. If the movement to nominate Underwood enlists the support of even a few State delegations, he will prove a formidable candidate in the convention; and the party might easily go further and make a much greater mistake than it would be guilty of in selecting Underwood as its standard bearer.

Charlotte's water supply is almost as much trouble as a losing baseball team.

The "maneuvering" of the "wet" and "dry" forces in Texas almost resulted in a drawn battle.

Charlotte's water supply is distressingly low and the near beer supply was cut off, apparently, at the most inopportune time.

Reciprocity Bill and Bill Taft should entertain most kindly feelings for the Democrats in Congress. The Democrats certainly are the friends of these Bills.

The Democrats continue to get on the Wilson band wagon. The indications are that those who are doing so have not made a mistake.

The back to the farm movement at present seems to be confined largely to the movement of summer boarders countryward.

An exchange expects to hear soon that the wall paper trust has hit the ceiling. Evidently is expecting the government to paste it a hard blow.

When Congress is done investigating everything else, perhaps an investigation of the House will be started. Undoubtedly that will be the last investigation Congress will undertake, but it has the investigating habit to such an extent that it may come to that ultimately.

The Virginia Senatorial primary is due in five weeks. It would be well for North Carolina if the Senatorial contest in this State could be settled five weeks hence. It is clearly evident that there is to be a fight over this matter lasting until the question of representation in the Senate is finally settled, and it does not at present appear that the contest is going to help the Democratic party or prove to be a good thing for the State in any particular.

The scrap between Governor Kitchin and the Raleigh News and Observer is interesting, to those who like contests of that kind, but those who do not like them probably outnumber those who do. In this case it will be safe to wager that the newspaper will come out of the fight on top, regardless of the Governor's ability as a fighter. As a rule, it requires several good fighters to lick one good newspaper scrapper; and the News and Observer is generally regarded as being able to put up a rather hefty battle when the occasion requires it.

Swatting the flies does not appear to diminish the fly population in Greensboro. The reason, perhaps, is that we have very few really earnest and enthusiastic fly swatters. The right kind of fight on the flies will secure results which can be traced and noted. It is doubtful if this city has a campaign of that kind this year. Next year we will probably be able to do better. The people have to be educated to appreciate the importance of all such movements as the campaign against files, but when the educational process has progressed sufficiently the results begin to be seen.

THE AUTO AS A WEAPON.

Charlotte Observer.

A decision in the Municipal court at Greensboro has held that a chauffeur may technically commit a simple assault with the machine he is driving. The doctrine opens a wide and inviting field of speculation. Had dueling not gone irrevocably out of fashion, we might expect the newly defined "weapon" to become a favorite choice upon the field of honor. Certainly two 60-horsepower cars stationed a hundred yards apart on an improved road would offer a means of settling differences quite as drastic as coffee and pistols for two, and would have the further advantage of being very much more spectacular from the viewpoint of seconds and surgeons.

At least one recent novel utilizes a car as the means of a slightly different type of duel. The owner has been injured by another man. Both climb into the car at the top af a long hill at the bottom of which a railroad train is due to pass within a minute or so. The car is sent towards the track at its utmost speed and—in accordance with calculations— the train strikes it. In the novel righteousness triumphs in the survival of its representative, but in actual practice it is probable that such an ordeal would result in the removal of car and occupants alike from further earthly activities.

The automobile has long been known as a social weapon. It has enabled not a few anxious climbers to attain heights otherwise not to be dreamed of. It has doubtless played its part in deciding a few hotly-contested love affairs in which two suitors were so equally acceptable that the possession of a car has decided the matter in the mind of the quarry. As a material weapon up to this time it has not come into notice. If the Greensboro decision should be adopted as a general precedent we may expect an interesting succession of rulings with regard to its implications.

Corporation "With a Heart."

The North Carolina Public Service Company, of Greensboro, appears from a far to be one big corporation with a heart. This concern has come forward and offered to supply free to any needy sick person in its city electric fans and electric service for same during the hot weather months. It has made the offer in a broad manner, writing a letter to such effect to the physicians of Greensboro, and will even run wires for the service free of charge. It is a thoughtful, generous, Christian act.—Wilmington Dispatch.

Children Playing In the Surf Add to Attractions of Beach

Photos by American Press Association.

CHILDREN are always interesting, and they are never more so than when at play. And children never find a better place to play than a sandy beach on which the surf advances and recedes with tantalising movements. There are no finer beaches than those at Coney Island and Brighton, adjoining resorts on the south shore of Long Island within the city limits of Greater New York. The beach of fine white sand recedes so gradually that children can wade out many feet with perfect safety unless there is a wind high enough to make the breakers dangerous. When the wind is gentle and it is only the tide that makes the surf the children are suited best, and even the most timid soon lose their fear of the water and paddle around gleefully, running backward or forward as the waves invite or threaten them. Bathing suit? If they have them the kiddies are pleased. If they have none they don't mind. They simply remove their outer garments and splash in in their "undies." In the pictures above the photographer has caught characteristic poses of children at the beach, and words are not needed to describe them. The pictures tell the story.

Honest Medicines Versus Fakes.

President Taft's recent message suggesting an amendment to the Pure Food and Drugs law in its relation to Prepared Medicines, does not refer to such standard medicines as Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and Foley's Kidney Pills, both of which are true medicines carefully compounded of ingredients whose medicinal qualities are recognized by the medical profession itself as the best known remedial agents for the diseases they are intended to counteract. For over three decades Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has been a standard remedy for coughs, colds and affections of the throat, chest and lungs for children and for grown persons, and it retains today its pre-eminence above all other preparations of its kind. Foley Kidney Pills are equally effective and meritorious. Howard Gardner.

Kidney Diseases Are Curable

under certain conditions. The right medicine must be taken before the disease has progressed too far. Mr. Perry A. RACK HANGS ON WALL

CONVENIENT TO KITCHEN OR WORK ROOM.

Provides Place Where Necessary Tools May Be Found When Needed—Is Simple, and Easily Made If Directions Are Followed.

A few simple tools are very necessary in every household, and it is equally necessary to assign some place to them, in which they will always be ready to hand whenever they are required. A good plan of doing this is to make a rack for them to be hung upon the wall in, perhaps, the kitchen or a work-room. We give, therefore, a sketch of a simple and easily-made rack for this purpose. The size of the rack must be determined by the number of tools it is destined to contain, and it should be made of wood about an inch in thickness. It is oblong in shape, and the corners are rounded and the edges bevelled.

The rack illustrated is capable of holding five tools, and for the reception of these tools, five rings are screwed in along the center of the board. The small sketch at the top (A), shows the kind of ring that should be procured for the purpose and which may be obtained at any ironmonger's at a very small cost.

Two further rings are screwed into the upper edge of the rack, by which it may be suspended from nails in the wall. When completed, it may either be painted or stained and the whole cost of making it will not amount to more than threepence or fourpence.

A useful rack for pipes can be made in exactly the same manner, and stained a nice dark oak, and with brass rings it will look by no means unornamental.

NEW NOTE IN HANDKERCHIEFS

Season's Fashion Decrees That It Should Carry Out Tone of the Costume.

If the accessories to a toilet are not in harmony there is a jarring note that mars the perfect ensemble. This season fashion has decreed that milady's dainty handkerchief should carry out the tone that predominates in hat, gown and silk stockings. Sometimes the color finds its way in narrow stripes that cover the whole surface of the handkerchief, or, again, it only forms the border. Or, again, the color motif is carried out in a tiny seal or monogram in the initial corner. However, they are all made of very sheer material and the filmy, linen, hand-spun, with tiny lines of drawn-work, are among the most beautiful and newest handkerchiefs shown. Hand-embroidery, of all descriptions, still holds its own, though the plain linen, daintily hemstitched with a tiny monogram worked in one corner, is still very popular, and is always in good taste.

But every woman displays an individuality in selecting her handkerchiefs, as she does with every part of her toilet, and these feminine bits of hand-made linens have a touch of personality that is very apparent to lovers of beautiful lingerie.

LOW-CUT WAIST ESSENTIAL

Costume for Theater Must Have This Distinction—Both Comfortable and Suitable.

The low-cut waist is far more universally popular since the wearing of evening dress at the theater has become fashionable. Today, although there is no necessity for a really decollete gown, the waist that is open at the throat is correct in style and incidentally is far more comfortable and suitable than the one made of heavy material and with high boned collar.

Theater dress is quite important nowadays, and is practically the same as the simple dinner dress. The difference between it and the ball gown is evident to any one initiated into the mysteries of dress. It may be every whit as costly as the ball gown, but it must look less expensive and it must be cut not so low and have, as a rule, longer sleeves.

This year there are many materials that would seem to have been woven especially for this use. Among them are the fascinating voile de soie, drap de soie, marquisette, and always the old favorite chiffon and liberty satin. The satin-finished crepe de Chine and lace, also, must not be forgotten.—Harper's Bazar.

The Sailor Collar.

Despite the length of time it has been with on dresses, suits and wraps. It is shown not only in the square shape, but in the round and pointed effects, the latter being particularly noticeable. This collar extends sometimes only to the shoulder line, but in other cases it forms long revers, sometimes crossed over in surplice fashion and fastened at the side.

HOW TO CURE ECZEMA, ITCH AND ALL SKIN DISEASES

Don't suffer a moment longer with Eczema, or any form of skin or blood troubles. Don't scratch or rub the skin. Just apply Hancock Sulphur Compound to the affected spots and it will stop the itching at once, and cure the trouble permanently. One 50c bottle will cure that prevalent trouble, Common Itch. Nothing cures skin troubles so quickly as Hancock Sulphur Compound. To beautify the complexion and remove black heads and pimples, use Hancock Sulphur Ointment, 25c. Mrs. Evelyn Garst, of Salem, Va., writes: "Three years ago I had a rough place on my cheek, it would burn and itch. I was fearful it might be of a cancerous nature. I used different preparations, but nothing ever helped it. One bottle of Sulphur Compound cured me completely. I recommend it to any one having any skin disease." JUST Rheumacide IT CURES

Rheumatism and Blood Diseases

The cause of rheumatism is excess uric acid in the blood. To cure rheumatism this acid must be expelled from the system. Rheumatism is an internal disease and requires an internal remedy. Rubbing with oils and liniments may ease the pain, but they will no more cure rheumatism than paint will change the fiber of rotten wood.

Cures Rheumatism To Stay Cured.

Science has discovered a perfect and complete cure called Rheumacide. Tested in hundreds of cases, it has effected marvelous cures. Rheumacide removes the cause, gets at the joints from the inside, sweeps the poisons out of the system, tones up the stomach, regulates the bowels and kidneys. Sold by druggists at 50c. and $1; in the tablet form at 25c. and 50c., by mail. Booklet free. Bobbitt Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

To Clean Tile Grates.

To clean tiled grates a strong solution of washing soda thickened with fuller's earth to make a paste serves the purpose in an excellent manner. This will easily remove stains or grease, while it is equally efficient in the case of grease-stained marble. The paste should be left on for an hour or two and then washed off with a flannel dipped in hot lather.

Scaling Fish.

The busy housewife will have no further dread of preparing fish for any size family if she will try dipping the fish in scalding water—the scales are then removed with no difficulty and much time saved.

A Quicker Way.

Instead of filling the salt and pepper shakers with the tedious means of a spoon, have made two small paper funnels for this purpose, which help wonderfully. The funnels are glued to make them firm.

Ginger Cookies.

Mix together a half cup of butter and a half cup of lard. Dissolve a teaspoonful of soda in a tablespoonful of boiling water; stir it into one cup of molasses and turn it over the butter and lard. Add one teaspoonful of cinnamon and one tablespoonful of ginger and mix well. Dissolve one cup of brown sugar in a cup of strong boiling coffee and pour into the mixture. Add enough flour to make a soft dough, roll rather thick, cut in the desired shape and bake in a quick oven about 15 minutes.

Cleaning Paint.

A useful solution for cleaning old, painted woodwork preparatory to repainting is to dissolve two ounces of washing soda in one quart of hot water. It should be used warm and the paint afterward washed with clear water.

After a woman has divorced one man and married another, the first one feels as an old doll looks when its owner gets a new one.

Trapped by a Woman

Mme. Yvonne Descaves was in despair. Her maid, the third one she had had during the short space of four months, had suddenly left when her mistress had told her that the silver spoons had not been cleaned well enough.

Mme. Descaves first burst into tears, but then she tied a clean dust rag around her golden hair and began to do the work herself.

Her husband was the traveling salesman of a jewelry firm in Rue de la Paix and had gone to Paris to confer with his employers about a trip to Lyons and southern France. She was expecting him back at two o'clock and must get his lunch ready for him.

It was almost noon when suddenly there was a loud knock at the door. Mme. Descaves saw two men in long coats and derby hats when she opened the door.

"Excuse me, madame," said the tallest of the two, "you will have to let us in. I suppose you know who we are; otherwise I will tell you. We come from police headquarters and have a warrant for the arrest of M. Paul Descaves. We also have a warrant to search the house."

"A warrant," gasped Mme. Descaves, and the men took advantage of her confusion to push her aside and slam the door behind them.

"It must be a mistake! What is my husband accused of? He left me only three hours ago. I do not believe you," she said. "Show me your warrant."

The tall man drew a paper half way out of his pocket and looked at his silent companion who grinned stupidly.

"Not the madame we saw him with at Auteuil last Sunday—eh, Jean!"

Mme. Descaves flushed with anger. "How dare you? Let me pass. I want to call a policeman. I don't believe—"

Jean took hold of her arm.

The tall man went over to the telephone. "5000 Louvres," he said, and added, "Police headquarters." Mme. Descaves' last doubt disappeared.

"Police headquarters? This is Detective Laurent speaking. We are at Neuilly. Descaves is not here. What? You don't say?

"Your husband has just been arrested at the Gare du Nord," he said, quietly turning to Mme. Descaves.

"What is he accused of?" she sobbed.

"Embezzlement," the tall man replied.

Mme. Descaves suddenly grew calm.

"Go and do your duty," she said. "What do you expect to find?"

"Some missing jewelry."

"Jewelry," Mme. Descaves exclaimed. "My husband's samples, I suppose."

The tall man nodded.

"We will have a look at them."

"They are in the safe upstairs. Here is the key."

Detective Laurent quickly opened the safe. Yes, the boxes were still there, and Mme. Descaves drew a sigh of relief when one of them was opened and showed its glistening contents.

Detective Laurent examined the diamond necklace critically.

"Of course! Just as I thought," he exclaimed.

"What?" asked Mme. Descaves.

"Imitation, paste," he grunted.

"Nonsense," said Mme. Descaves.

"I know what I am talking about," said Laurent.

"Perhaps it is because it is only a sample," she suggested.

Laurent grunted.

"He got the real thing from Leverrier & Co., all right enough."

"Stop a moment," said Mme. Descaves, suddenly, and handed Laurent a bracelet with pearls and rubies. "Is this paste, too?" she asked.

Laurent looked at it.

"Just like the rest of the lot," he replied, dryly.

Mme. Descaves said nothing more, but calmly surrendered the bracelet. When they had emptied the safe, they all went downstairs.

"Wait a moment," said Mme. Descaves, with tears in her voice. "You might as well know it all. I will not protect a man who has treated me like that. There are more diamonds."

"Where are they? Hurry up now, please."

"They are hidden—in the cellar," she gasped. "He thought they would be safe there."

"Show them to us. But no monkey business, now, or you'll be sorry."

Mme. Descaves laughed hysterically.

"I shall not try any monkey business, as you call it," she replied, bitterly. "Oh! How I hate him now! Come along."

They followed her silently down the narrow cellar stairs.

"There they are—in the box in the corner."

They pushed her roughly aside and went in, one of them striking a match. With a shriek Mme. Descaves slammed the door and turned the key. Then she ran upstairs and called for a policeman.

"Thieves! Two men—in the cellar—I have locked them up," was all she could say before she fainted.

The policeman on the corner heard, blew his whistle, and two others, running up, were just in time to catch the two thieves.

"I really believed them for a little while," said Mme. Descaves to her husband a little later, "until they told me that Aunt Marguerite's bracelet was imitation, too. Then I knew they were thieves."

her morning work. "I know of her of old! She wouldn't think of paying Mr. Fischer's niece wages like a common servant—indeed no!—and yet she expects far more of her than any servant would give! Edith is too valuable to have her running off with some fellow like Noel. Something ought to be done about it."

"Supper ready, mother?" called Noel eagerly, as he entered the house on record time after the blowing of the closing whistles.

"It will be in a minute," called Mrs. Ainsworth. "You in a hurry, Noel?"

But the young man was already half way up stairs, and did not reply.

He ate his supper absently, and left the house in a rush.

"Spring fever has taken a new turn, hasn't it, mother?" inquired Mr. Ainsworth, mildly.

"Yes," answered his wife confidently, "and I'm right glad of it."

Once out of the sordid streets and away from curious eyes, the young man drew a note from his pocket and again devoured it with adoring eyes. Just a scrap of paper, and a few hasty written words:

"Meet me at the Willow Bridge at seven.—E. F."

Meet her! His heart sang in tune to the twittering birds, the golden spring sunshine, the budding of new life. How many times they had walked to the Willow Bridge in the tender twilight. And now he was to see her again, and have an opportunity to tell her all that was in his heart.

When he reached the bridge she was leaning against the rail watching the flooded stream. Her face flushed beautifully when she saw him.

"Edith," he cried, holding her hands tightly, "do you know how I have wanted you? After you told me not to come any more, I felt that I ought not to trouble you, but when your precious note came today I—"

"My note?" faltered the girl, "I have sent you no note!"

"Then how did you happen to be here?" he asked in bewilderment.

"Did you not ask me to come?"

She drew from her glove a folded paper, and held it out to him.

"Will you meet me at the Willow Bridge this evening? I must see you.
"N. A."

Mechanically he fumbled in his pocket for the note that had meant so much to him, and held it while she read.

"Someone has played a joke on us," she said quietly, and her face had grown suddenly white and tired. "It is the first day of April—we ought to have thought!"

"It is the best joke I ever heard of then," declared the young man stoutly. "It must certainly have been Cupid!

"Listen, Edith. I thought I did right to leave when you desired me to, but I know now I should have told you first—it is your right to know!

"You mean more to me than all the rest of the world. Will you marry me, dear, and come to the old house in the hills that I have told you about so often?"

With a little sob, she went to the shelter of his arms.

"There will be trouble about this," she said presently. "Aunty Fischer will be very indignant!"

"If it is going to be unpleasant for you, won't you marry me right away, Edith? Then you can stay with mother while I go up to get things ready."

"That would be nice," agreed this home-hungry girl who thought with joy of the pleasant, motherly little woman. "She is such a dear!"

"Let me see those notes again," exclaimed the young man, with a sudden inspiration. He smiled tenderly over the perusal.

"Now, sweetheart, we must go and tell mother!"

"I've always wanted a daughter," cried the little woman, kissing the girl tenderly. "And I've liked you from the first time I saw you.

"You must come to me, dear, while Noel goes up to the farm. We'll have plenty to do getting ready for your new home."

Left alone, she wiped her eyes and spectacles suspiciously.

"And isn't it a mercy I wasn't found out?" she cried with sudden recollection, "for I never thought until this blessed minute about crossing the T's!"

Quickest Saald That Grows.

The quickest salad that grows and the least used in this country is mustard and cress. Sow curled garden cress in long rows, four inches apart. It matures in 21 days. As soon as it breaks through the ground sow the same quantity of white mustard, and the two will be ready at the same time. They should be cut when about an inch and a half high and used mixed in equal parts. In England and on the continent it is used extensively for sandwiches, dinner salads, with lettuce leaves, and for garnishing meats. The round turnip radishes take only about the same time to mature if sown in rich ground, so it is easy to have a home grown salad, if nothing else, the first of July.—Harper's Bazar.

Rhubarb Bread.

Prepare two quarts of rhubarb and cook slowly, cutting it in half-inch pieces so as to avoid stringiness. Stew with one pint of sugar, adding more if too tart. When very soft rub through a sieve and return to the fire until at the boiling point. Have ready a number of slices of two-day old bread buttered generously. Spread them on a platter and pour over sufficient of the hot sauce to thoroughly soak them. Add another layer of bread, cover with the remainder of the sauce. Set aside until cold and serve with cream and sugar.

THE "REDUSO"

The Advanced Idea in Corsets

Half of women's "nerves" are corset ills, caused directly by the discomfort and annoyance of an ill-fitting corset. In the REDUSO, science and common sense have evolved a corset for stout women that adds shapely lines to the wearer, and lends itself to the support of the body.

The Reduso Corset

Is built and feels like any other type of corset. It is free of straps, harness-like arrangement and clumsily fitting contrivances.

REDUSO CORSETS are durable without being stiff—and valuable without being expensive.

THE REDUSO accomplishes its remarkable reduction of the figure from one to five inches—entirely by its scientific principle of goring.

ONE LESSON IN GEOGRAPHY

Schoolmaster, Endeavoring to Aid Pupils, Gets Reply From Bright Boy That Was Unexpected.

A schoolmaster was taking a class of boys in geography, the lesson being the islands of the world. The boys were asked to give the name of any island which came to their minds, but their knowledge had reached its limit, and the class had come to a standstill so far as islands were concerned.

"Come, boys," said the master. "Is there no one here who can give me the name of another island?"

But no answer came from the class.

"Now, then," said he, "to help you a little. Supposing I were a piece of land, and all around (pointing) was water. What island should I represent?"

The answer he expected, of course, was, "The Isle of Man." But a bright boy, very eager to answer, said:

"Please, sir, the Scilly Islands."

Mistaken.

"A man doesn't learn what happiness is until he has lost it."

"I thought you were a bachelor?"

Ice Cream Hint.

How many housekeepers ever think of utilizing melted ice cream? Instead of throwing away the small left over portions that remain in freezer or mold, this melted cream should be incorporated in cake, cookies, or some small dessert. For the latter a little gelatin should be added, varying, of course, with the result desired. Melted chocolate ice cream into which chopped marshmallows have been stirred, and a little melted gelatin added, makes a delicious combination. Chopped fruits, as bananas, figs, and dates, also give a pleasing variety. When using melted ice cream for cake leave out the milk called for in the recipe and use less butter and sugar. Judgment must be used in combining quantities as no general rule can be given. The flavor of the cake must be considered and the ice cream flavor must harmonize with it.

Lemon and Salt.

Ivory knife handles that have become blackened may be cleaned by rubbing them with lemon dipped in salt, after which they should be washed in cold water and they will be quite white again.

WORK PROGRESSING RAPIDLY ON ELM STREET CAR LINE

Expected That Line Will be Completed in Less Than Three Weeks.

The new addition to the car line of the Public Service Company of this city is lengthening steadily up North Elm street from the Country Club, a mile and a half distant, to the Church street crossing where the line will connect with the other branches of the system. The trolley has been placed along the entire route and the advanced portion of the work has reached within a half block of the connection. At the close of work yesterday the ties and rails had been laid and spiked to a point a few yards above Frisco street. The steam engine which is furnishing the power for plowing up the macadam is now opposite the home of O. C. Wysong, and the finish of the work of trenching prior to laying the ties will probably be reached by tomorrow afternoon. However the line will not be completed for two weeks or more as in only a few places has the macadam of the street been replaced, the entire route as yet being difficult of passage. The rails have been left uncovered as they must be bonded together, and it is this part of the work that will occupy the attention of the force for the next two or three weeks, when without unexpected interruption the officials of the company state that the line will be completed.

Chain Found in Water Hydrant

Yesterday morning when the firemen tried to cut the water off at a hydrant on North Davie street they found that this was impossible. Inasmuch as the hydrant valve was working perfectly when the water was turned on the firemen were at a loss. Thinking the hydrant was broken the city began working and after taking the hydrant down found that a chain five feet long was inside the hydrant and prevented the shutoff valve from working. The chain was evidently left in the main during the progress of construction had remained there until yesterday when the strong suction of the fire engine caused the chain to move up the main and lodge in the hydrant.

GETS ALL OF THE JUICE

New Squeezing Device That Drains Lemon Dry and Keeps Seeds Out of Glass.

A squeezing device that will get all the juice out of a lemon and at the same time keep the seeds from getting in the lemonade has been designed by a New Jersey man. It is shown in the illustration and practically explains itself. The squeezer consists of two parts pivotally connected, one of them forming a cup and the other having a plunger fixed inside. A lemon or orange is cut in two and placed in the cup, cut side down. The other member of the squeezer is then brought over till the plunger rests on the fruit in the cup. By pressing the two handles together the fruit is flattened until every drop of juice is out of it, and the juice may then be poured into pitcher or glass through the little lip which is seen on one side of the cup. The space through which the liquid flows is so small that a seed can not pass through, and the seeds together with the skin of the lemon, can be dumped out afterward.

HOW TO PUT AWAY LEMONS

Simple Instructions by Which the Housekeeper Can Economize This Summer.

Lemons are an item that every house-wife can economize on this summer if they follow these instructions. Dip each one in melted paraffine and wrap in waxed paper. Lay away in a large glass jar or crock. The large, thin-skinned ones are to be preferred, as these can now be purchased for about one cent each, and, as you know, in the middle of the summer you are required to pay three times as much for not as good quality; an hour's time, ten cents' worth of paraffine and five cents' worth of waxed paper will be considered money well spent if you now put away enough to last you through the hot spell.

When you wish to use them, all that will be necessary will be to dip them in fairly hot water and not only will the paraffine entirely come off, but the hot dip will also improve the lemon by making the extracting of the juice much easier and more complete.

NEW FIELD OPENED BY LOCAL POST OF SALVATION ARMY

At eight o'clock tonight at 705 South Elm street, the Salvation Army will start a new section in their work at Greensboro. Captain Lebby and his sister recently placed in charge of the local work of the Salvation Army, after looking over the work have decided to start the Young People's Legion, known to all Salvationists as "YPL."

This takes in girls and boys between the ages of 14 to 21, and the purpose of this particular branch of the work is to prevent the loss of interest, when a Junior soldier feels they are too large to be classed as such; and at the same time are not large enough to be Seniors. So this Y. P. L. forms a connecting link between the Junior and Senior war. It is not necessary to be a member of the Salvation Army to become a member of this Legion, nor does being a member of the Legion make one a member of the Salvation Army. There are also two classes. First members who are Christians are given a little red button with a monogram composed of the letters Y. P. L., meaning Young People's Legion Member. Second Members who are not Christians who are termed associate members or companion members are given a button with blue background and white letters monogram C. Y. P. L., meaning Companion Young People's Legion.

The object is that the red button members are to take great interest in the blue button members and through prayer and personal dealings try to induce them to accept Christ as their Saviour. There will be some five or six reds taken in tonights.

Capt. Lebby states that in larger Army centers where the work has been firmly planted for a good many years that this particular work has been the means of creating quite an interest to the younger set and has accomplished much and permanent good, and he is looking forward to it proving successful in Greensboro. The public is given a warm welcome to attend.

The Lawn Party at the Moravian Church Friday evening will afford a pleasant occasion for all who attend.

Nervous Women

For nervous, tired women, we recommend Cardui. Cardui is a woman's medicine. It acts specifically on the female organs and has a tonic, building effect on the whole system. It contains no harmful ingredients, being a pure vegetable extract. If you suffer from some form of female trouble, get Cardui at once and give it a fair trial.

TAKE CARDUI

It Will Help You

Mrs. W. W. Gardner, of Paducah, Ky., tried Cardui and writes: "I think Cardui is just grand. I have been using it for eleven years. I am 48 years old and feel like a different woman, since I have been taking it. I used to suffer from bearing down pains, nervousness and sleeplessness, but now the pains are all gone and I sleep good. I highly recommend Cardui for young and old." Try it.

AT ALL DRUG STORES

Children's Hats

FOR a girl somewhere above eight years the first hat is appropriate. As hats go, it is quite a simple affair with a broad, round crown and drooping brim which turns up in front. It is of chip or straw braid in a natural color. A big bow of ribbon spreads over the back with two hanging ends, and there is a full wreath of apple blossoms (those old-time favorites of childhood) about the crown.

One of the most successful of children's hats, which might with equal propriety be classed as a bonnet, is shown in the second picture. It is made of a thin silk to which lace braid is applied. The crown is a puff of the silk. The brim is made of three ruffles of the side-plaited silk over a single box-plaited ruffle edged with lace. Ribbon is laid in small loops about the crown and in a rosette of loops, finished with hanging ends, at the left side. Little clusters of June roses are placed about the brim and in the center of the rosette. This is a soft and charming piece of millinery art which may be made in any light color, to suit the individual taste.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

NEW STYLE FOR FOULARD

A good many contrasts of coloring and actual pattern, too, are notable in the new foulards; an absolutely diverse design being often interwoven in the one length of material, while several model gowns combine spotted foulard and plain twill silk or fine face cloth. So one has quite sufficient—and Parisian—precedent for bringing together the plain and spotted blue foulards, and, for further introducing—in the manner suggested by the sketch—graduated bands and flatly folded rosettes of black satin, a collar of the finest lawn, and a little frilled band to match, being other accessories of the corsage.

Surah Twill Silk.

Surah twill silk in solid color is a material which is claiming much favorable attention, says a fashion exchange. This is being used by the best model houses in Paris for making tailored suits and three-piece costumes. This new surah has a high-luster surface and is used in exactly the same manner as satins have been so freely employed recently.

Surah is especially well adapted for summer use in America. It is durable, sufficiently dressy for a handsome suit, light weight, and therefore comfortable for summer use in many parts of the United States. More than this, domestic silk mills are equipped to produce surah silks.

HAIR MUST SUIT TOILETTE

Notable Is the Revival of the "Bang," a Fashion Which Is Not Received With Joy.

Nowadays it is found convenient to change the style of hair dressing in order that it may agree with this hat or that dress. There are some toilettes that would be bereft of their effect, and even be made to look absurd, if the hair were not arranged in keeping.

The curled fringe, called the "bang," has been revived.

One reason for the justifiable revival of the light-curled lovelocks that stray about the forehead is the immense popularity of the short center parting, which is just a little trying without their softening influence; and another is the reinstatement of the heavy plait or the twisted drapery of hair which is used to frame the chignon. When the plait weights the hair over the forehead the counteracting effect of a few gossamer-like tendrils of hair below is requisite for the sake of elegance.

One of the coiffures of the moment illustrates the conical dressing that is becoming to the girl with a small face and mignon features. It is built up by means of a twisted drapery of hair which resembles a plait, and below it is a thick coil held in place by tortoise-shell prongs. The hair is carelessly ondule beneath, so that the ears are hidden, and there are a few stray lovelocks on the forehead.

In another the plait is used as a coronal merely, and all the rest of the hair is curly except the childish-looking straight fringe.

The Volatile Waist Line.

Though the waist line is less versatile than it used to be, and is more and more inclined to assume the conventional position, the Empire effect is still to be seen. For reception and dancing gowns it is very graceful, and the soft outline it gives to the figure is delightfully picturesque. But for the street all this is out of place; it gives the wearer a silhouette that is untidy, and suggests a looseness that is altogether objectionable. In regard also to evening gowns the same fault may be found. So long as a toilette is to be worn chiefly while walking or standing, the short waist is permissible—even desirable—but for a dinner, concert or theater it is no longer so. The bust, unconfined, falls out of shape, and it is the realization of this fact that has led to so many of the newest evening bodices being made with swathed draperies and close fitting lines.

The Season's Colors.

Navy blues promise to predominate to a very great extent for outdoor wear. In the materials woven of two colors navy is often combined with deep plum, black or a brighter dark blue. Trimmings of red and white are vouchsafed to navy serges. Greens are very far from holding as high a place in the preparations for the opening season as they have done this winter, but combinations of blue and green are fancied, while mustard and resedas figure prominently with all shades of deep yellow in the harmonies carried out in chiffon and satin.

BY THE OLD SUNDIAL

BY VIRGINIA BLAIR

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

Back of the Martins' new bungalow was a terraced garden with rose borders and a fountain at the end. In the very center of the garden stood a sundial, around the pedestal of which the dark-leaved ivy clung.

The Martins had made their money in patent medicine. Their so-called bungalow was a palace, and they kept six servants. In the bottom of her heart Mrs. Martin would have preferred a six-roomed cottage, with one maid to do the heavy work. She was a round, rosy, healthy-minded woman, who liked to cook and scrub, and who was distinctly bored by her magnificence. Her husband was bored also, but he hid it because he had really made his money against her advice. She had feared that they might lose their happiness, when they gained a fortune, and she had not been far from the truth.

Their daughter Angela was like her mother. In spite of her ethereal name, she waxed round and rosy as she grew into young womanhood. She was domestic in her tastes and would have made an excellent wife for a poor man.

But her father had made up his mind that she should not marry a poor man. Hence, when suitors came to woo, he selected an ambitious young man, who knew that Angela's money, united to his own income, would make him a power in the financial world.

Angela rebelled in vain. She had her own ideas about the man she wanted to marry. On the other side of the hedge at the foot of the garden was a little stream, and here, every day in mid-summer, came a certain youth, on fishing bent. Perhaps the stream would not have held as much charm for him if he had not known that Angela was on the other side of the hedge.

The two young people had been classmates at school, but the Martins'

Tucked a Note Into a Certain Niche

increasing fortune had taken Angela into more fashionable surroundings. During her years at boarding school she had been shut away from the friends of her childhood, but when she came back to her home town she showed herself constant to her youthful companions. Her father objected strenuously.

Hence it came about that it was only when John West fished in the little stream that he could meet Angela. Every day when she could slip away she spent on the other side of the hedge ready to run back into her own garden at the slightest warning. The days that she could not come she tucked a note into a certain niche in the carved sundial, from which John West, reaching over the hedge, abstracted it.

So it happened that the sundial knew all the secrets of the pair. It heard their vows as they sat in the shadow of the hedge, and it kept their notes safely in that inner pocket of stone.

The plans of the young couple for the future included a modest cottage in a distant town. There was to be a garden, but not a terraced garden, with flowers in it. They were to raise vegetables and keep a cow. All of Angela's instincts were of the country bred. She had heard her mother tell of the first days of her married life and of the joy there had been in their humble home.

"Father wants me to marry a man with money," Angela told her lover; "but I won't, I won't!"

"There is only one trouble," John said slowly; "everybody's going to think that I am marrying you for your money. Even if I don't take it, and if we live on my income, they will say that I expect to get it sometime."

"If he would only cut us off without a penny," said Angela; "but mother won't let him do that because she is afraid I will suffer."

"You see if you cannot talk her over," John advised. "I do not want to be known as a fortune hunter."

But Mrs. Martin was obdurate. Though riches had brought her unhappiness, she still desired them for her daughter, and at last John West took a stand.

Jimmie's Misdemeanor

"Jimmie broke another window today playing ball," said Jimmie's mother as soon as his father came home. "I suppose there will be another dollar to pay out for that. I didn't say anything to him—I just told him to wait and you would talk to him about it."

Jimmie raised an inquiring glance over the edge of the geography to his father's face and dropped it into the middle Atlantic states again immediately.

"I did not," he said, defiantly. "Anyhow, I didn't know the ball was going over that way. Harry Miller ought to have stopped it."

His father looked at Jimmie severely.

"Come here, young man," he said, "and let's see about this. Do you think I have nothing to do except pay for things you smash right and left?"

"Aw, we weren't only playin'," objected Jimmie, sliding down a little farther into his chair. "A kid can't have no fun around this street."

"Did I tell you to come over here or didn't I?" asked his father, sternly.

Jimmie slowly sidled over to his father's chair with his hands clasped behind him.

"Now, then, how did it happen?" his father demanded. "Come on; out with it!"

Jimmie hesitated and his mother volunteered to supply the information.

"Oh, it happened the way it always happens," she said. "He was playing ball in the street again when I've told him dozens of times not to. It's a wonder to me the little savages don't break twenty windows a day. Mr. Handtmann came over here and said Jimmie knocked the ball or struck it or whatever they do, and it went right through his side window and nearly hit Mrs. Handtmann's mother, where she was knitting inside the window. I told him you'd see him about it tonight."

His father struggled to suppress a smile and Jimmie thought he descried favorable symptoms.

"I don't suppose old Handtmann was fretting about his mother-in-law getting hit, was he?" he asked. "How about it, Jimmie? I am now waiting for your version of this catastrophe."

"Well, we was playin' only a little while," began Jimmie, "and we choosed up sides and I was captain on our side."

"Where do you play?" asked his father.

"I was on second so I could tell my side what to do," explained Jimmie.

His mother interrupted with a frown of impatience. "What has all that to do with his breaking the window?" she demanded. "You're overlooking the main point, as usual, William."

"Well, wait a minute now," cautioned Jimmie's father, "and we'll get this thing straightened out. So you played second, did you? And then what, Jim?"

"Well, Harry Miller's side made three runs in the second inning," Jimmie went on, "and he was playin' right field. He's bigger than any of us kids, anyhow. He ain't got no right to be on a team that's mostly only about nine or ten, has he, pa?"

"We'll take that up some other time," said his father. "I want to know about this Handtmann window business. How did that happen?"

"I don't know how it happened," Jimmie insisted, "but Willie McGrath got a base on balls—"

"Say, have you youngsters got an umpire in these games?" his father demanded.

"Sure!" replied Jimmie. "We got two—one on bases and one on the home plate, just like the big leagues!"

"What do you know about that?" grinned his father, looking across at the maternal frown, which was unyielding even in the face of this surprising testimony.

"And after Willie McGrath got on first 'Chick' Schmidt lammed out a hot one that was good for two bases, but that ice wagon, McGrath, only got to third on it."

"He should have scored easily, shouldn't he?" said his father, sympathetically.

"William!" cautioned Jimmie's mother.

Jimmie's father hastily returned to the inquisition. "And then what happened?" he demanded.

"Well, I was next up and I tried to bring 'em both home," Jimmie explained. "After I'd let a couple go past me I seen a good one floatin' up and I pasted it to right field for a home run!"

"Good boy!" exclaimed his father, enthusiastically.

His mother rose impatiently and flounced out of the room.

"Then Harry Miller didn't get it," went on the heavy hitter; "it bounced clean over the curb and went through the window—I didn't know, 'cause I was runnin' around them bases. That tied the score," he added, hopefully, "but the game busted up because Handtmann swiped the ball and chased us all away."

Jimmie's father studied the problem nearly a minute before rendering his decision.

"Never mind, Jim," he said. "It was an accident. Here's a quarter. I'll take care of that window business and I'll get that ball back, too. Run along now and get your lessons."

Curiosity makes innocent bystanders of us all.

BLACK VELVET IS EFFECTIVE

Just a Little Put on Your Gown Somewhere Will Help Make It Fashionable.

One way of being fashionable this season is to introduce black velvet ribbon into the building of your gown.

It matters not what particular part of your costume you garnish with this effective trimming.

Also the amount used is a question of personal taste. The main point is that you realize the part black velvet ribbon is playing in fashionable furbelows and gown yourself accordingly.

Some of the more elaborate of the voile frocks for afternoon wear are embroidered in scallops around the bottom of the skirt, and under the scallops is placed a broad band of black velvet ribbon.

Others are plain around the bottom, with the straight overskirt edged with ball fringe.

Here the black velvet is used to give the waist line and is made into a chic bow with ends in the back or at the side-back.

A particularly striking model has black velvet around the edge of the sleeves, finished on the top with a bow.

A tailored tie, the ends caught with silk tassels, gives a touch of black at the front.

One unusual white chiffon evening gown is given long sweeping lines by bands of ribbon placed across the shoulders and extended to the hem of the dress.

TEXTILE PROBLEM IS VITAL

Women Should Learn How to Detect Imitations and Combinations of Inferior Fibres.

The textile problem is becoming one of vital interest and importance because of the many imitations of standard goods that are constantly being put on the market at a reasonable price. Because of the desire of women for rich, expensive looking materials, at a moderate price, manufacturers have striven to produce goods to meet the demand by combining textile fibres of different origin, or inferior fibres with good, producing rich and effective fabrics which are often so well finished that it takes a shrewd shopper to detect the imitation before the material is used or laundered, as the case may be.

Women, as a whole, are not good judges of values and depend largely upon the prices asked for goods rather than upon their ability to judge quality. If we had laws governing textile purity, as we have food, the shopper would know for what she was paying and could govern herself accordingly.—Annie L. Robinson, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins.

For the Goldfish.

For those who have goldfish: Allow sun to shine on them for a short time each day except real hot days. If fish become moldy or cloudy appearing, put into salt water—one teaspoon of salt to quart of water, later changing to weaker solution. This will restore frozen fish and fish which have become exhausted by remaining out of water. As long as gills are wet fish will live. I have revived one after it had been out of water at least four hours. Goldfish can stand temperature as cold as zero unless they have become acclimated to warm rooms. If waste from fish is white like twine string, do not feed so often. Always remove a sick or overfed fish and keep in separate dish so he will not cause sickness in others. Never feed cracker or bread. Fish food and flies are best.

Sauce for Fricassee.

Stir together two tablespoonfuls of butter and one of flour previously mixed with a little milk. Add a pint of milk and white stock mixed in equal quantities; or a pint of milk alone. Add a sliced carrot, a chopped onion, a few sprigs of parsley and salt and pepper to taste. Put into the sance whatever meat it is intended to fricassee and stew gently until tender. Remove the pieces into another saucepan, thicken with the yolks of two eggs, squeeze in the juice of half a lemon, pour over the meat and serve very hot.

China Chile.

Cold roast mutton should be diced and placed in a saucepan with a good pint of green peas, one head of lettuce torn into shreds, sufficient gravy to moisten and a good seasoning. Simmer for half an hour and serve with an accompaniment of boiled rice.

LUNCH FOR EVENING GUESTS

Simple Refreshments Easily Prepared Without Spending Much Money or Effort.

When girl friends drop in unexpectedly for the evening dainty refreshments add much to the pleasure of the guests without causing any great expenditure of either money or effort. Hot chocolate is a favorite beverage of all womankind and the truly hospitable woman is always an adept at making it.

To make hot chocolate allow one ounce of chocolate to each pint of liquid. To make one quart put two ounces of chocolate in a double boiler with one pint of hot water. Stir until the chocolate is melted, then add one pint of rich milk. Beat and stir rapidly until it boils again. Add three tablespoonfuls of sugar, take from the fire and beat quickly. Have the chocolate pot hot when the chocolate is turned in and served with whipped cream. If slightly thickened chocolate is desired make a thin paste of two teaspoonfuls of cornstarch moistened with milk and stir slowly into the mixture just before it is taken from the stove.

Dainty sandwiches to serve with the chocolate are made by cutting white bread into thin slices and spreading them with a paste made of finely chopped pecan nut meats and mayonnaise. Lettuce sandwiches have a leaf of crisp lettuce spread with the mayonnaise as filling. Butter the bread before using the filling. Some hostesses keep a jar of chopped nuts or peanut butter on hand all the time and so are never at a loss when the unexpected guest drops in. Peanut sandwiches are made by spreading one slice of the bread thinly with butter and the other with the peanut butter. Put together with a lettuce leaf.

When a man begins to sympathize with himself it's a sign he has outlived his usefulness.

Pepper Omelet.

First a tablespoonful of butter is heated in an omelet pan; two tablespoonfuls of sifted flour is added, but not browned; a pint of strong beef stock is used for the blending; half a dozen mushrooms, six whole peppers, a dash of pepper and a teaspoonful of salt, and the pan is set on the back of the stove for twenty minutes, after half of a grated nutmeg is added. This must barely simmer; then two dozen boiled shrimp are put in, three minutes more allowed for cooking, a plain omelet made, the mixture poured over, the omelet turned once and placed on a very hot platter. To be served at once on hot plates; an omelet that stands is an omelet that is spoiled.

Cream of Lettuce Soup.

Wash and remove the poor leaves from three heads of lettuce and place in the saucepan of a double boiler. Cook until the leaves are tender, then press them through a fine sieve and put back into the saucepan. Add one and a half pints of white stock and bring to a boil. Mix a tablespoonful of flour with a little milk and stir into the soup. When the soup is of a creamy consistency add a tablespoonful of butter and season with salt and pepper.

SHOOTING SCRAPE, MAYBE MURDER, ON GILMER STREET

As a result of a shooting scrape on Gilmer street last night shortly before 12 o'clock, Nannie Mimes, a negro woman, lies in St. Leo's Hospital at the point of death and Carl Pickett, a worthless negro, is now dodging the police of the city.

The particulars leading to the shooting were somewhat hard to learn, for despite the fact that it occurred at the home of the Mimes woman where several negroes were gathered none of them could tell a straight tale about the affair and the woman was not in condition a tell anything last night. It appears, however, that the shooting was a result of a drunken row and Pickett becoming angry fired at the woman. The ball struck her about the eye and ranged inward. It is hardly thought that the skull was penetrated.

Immediately after the shooting Pickett left for parts unknown and the police are yet searching every conceivable place in hopes of capturing him before he leaves the city.

Signs for Offices of City Officials

The city commissioners have secured a number of signs and had them placed over their office doors, in order that people having business to transact with any one of the commissioners will know the instant he enters the city hall building just which officer he desires to speak to. There are signs over the office of the Mayor, Commissioner of Public Works, Commissioner of Public Safety, Treasurer, Inspector; also signs for the window at which taxes are paid, where water rents are paid and where licenses are issued. The signs are neatly gotten up.

GREENSBORO TAKES SECOND OF SERIES FROM HORNETS

Poor Support Accorded Twirlers—Bauswine Allowed Fewer Hits But Walters was More Effective in Close Places—Pretty Doubles by Locals.

Greensboro took the second of the series with Charlotte by a score of 3 to 2 yesterday afternoon, making the fifth straight game the Patriots have won and placing them within about twenty points of Winston, which team is now holding down first position in the percentage column. Walters and Bauswine were the opposing pitchers. Neither of the slabmen received very good support. Bauswine allowed by far the fewer hits, but Walters was the more effective with men on bases. Several times men reached third on one side or the other but were allowed to die there, the necessary hit not being allowed by the pitcher.

The fielding was listless in places, but here and there was some good work and fast plays. Carroll starred for the locals, making several good stops and pretty throws to first. Fuller, too, did good work, he and Carroll pulling off a nice double that ended the game. Doyle also assisted in a neat double. McMillan starred with the stick, getting two two-baggers during the game.

The score was close throughout. Greensboro made one run in the first; Charlotte tied it in the fourth. Greensboro made the second tally in the fifth; Charlotte again tied it up in the seventh. In the eighth Greensboro got the winning run and in the last prevented the visitors from scoring.

GREENVILLE AND WINSTON DIVIDE THE DOUBLE-HEADER

Greenville, S. C., July 25.—Greenville and Winston broke even on two exceptionally pretty games, played on the local diamond this afternoon. Greenville won the first 1 to 0, and Winston the second 2 to 0. The pitching was good and the fielding of the visitors was perfect and that of the locals was very little less. Both games were close and exciting all the way through and kept the fans uneasy until the result. The fast playing of the pitchers, Greenville's first baseman and and Winston's second baseman, were exceptionally good. While the games were really doubtful there were no especial features besides what is told by the scores.

SPARTANBURG LOST SWAT-FEST TO THE ELECTRICIANS

Spartanburg, S. C., July 25.—A burlesque was won from the locals by Anderson 17 to 8. None of the pitchers were at all effective and the game was merely a contest to see which could hit the ball the furtherest. About 350 persons were present at the beginning of the game and about 90 when the contest closed. It was slow and will affect the local attendance.

DIAMOND DUST

Rube says he will get his game also.

These Patriots can say, "Sweet is revenge."

Winson has cancelled the order placed sometime ago for a flag pole.

Three straights from Charlotte will make things about even with our friends, the enemy.

We want all of this series, so the Hornets can get their victories of this week when they are in Winston.

The Charlotte fans used to call Tony's defeating them luck, but they have learned that he simply uses better judgment than his opponents.

They say that Clancy has taken on another pitcher. He will have to hunt a long while before he will find one that can hold down Doyle's men.

Winston is getting mighty close around our neighborhood now, but in about a week we will be moving upward and out of the way of the obstreperous followers of Clancy.

It looks to us like there will be another team at the top of the percentage column Saturday night. Modesty forbids our saying which it will be, but you might look at the percentage column and see with what team it is possible.

Yesterday's attendance looked a little more like what a winning ball team deserves. This afternoon a good crowd and a proper show of enthusiasm ought to make sure the three srtaights from Charlotte, which are needed to help us to the top this week.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE AT ELON COLLEGE

Elon College, July 25.—There are to be three farmer's institutes in Alamance county this summer; the first of which is to be held today at Mebane, the third of which is to be held at Friendship High School, August 23, and the second of which will be held at Elon College tomorrow, Wednesday, July 26th, beginning at 10 o'clock. In connection with the Farmer's Institute at the college will be held the Women's Institute, by Mrs. Sue V. Hollowell and others. The object of this women's institute is to bring together the women of the farm districts and better acquaint them with themselves and the methods of bettering the rural home, specifically in the matter of cooking, sanitary conditions, dairying, poultry raising, and in beautifying the home in general. An interesting feature of the Women's Institute will be the prize of $1 to be awarded for the best loaf of bread baked by a girl from the farm. A prize also of $1 will be given for the best pure-bred corn, and a similar amount for the best pure-bred pig between 8 and 12 weeks old.

Prof. C. L. Newman, who is professor of agriculture at A. & M. College, will discuss questions of interest to the farmers. He will also maintain a question box and it will be a full discussion of all topics presented to him for his opinion.

The boys are especially invited to attend the institute and they will be given many new ideas of interest to the young men. The institute begins at 10 o'clock in the morning, adiourning for dinner, and beginning at 1:30 in the afternoon. Chas. F. Cates, Mebane, N. C., is the chairman of the Alamance County Institute and Mr. E. T. Turner is the secretary and treasurer. The farmers of western Alamance and eastern Guilford are cordially invited to attend. The college campus and administration building will be used for the institute. D. W. Brown, Elon College, N. C., is chairman of the local committee.

Don't forget the Lawn Party Friday evening at Moravian church.

This GAS RANGE Will Please You

Everything At A Convenient Height

The Broiler
Just high enough so that you can watch the meat without stooping.

The Cooking Top
Where your boiling, frying and general cooking is done. This is fixed at a most convenient height and does away with all awkward high lifting.

Extra Warming Plate
This is placed immediately under the broiler next to the cooking top. This plate will be found mighty handy for warming foods, also for slow boiling.

The Oven
Right above the broiler, easy to get at and easy to watch.

The Warming Closet
This is located in the bottom of the range. The closet is large enough to warm the dishes and keep the food warm for a party of twelve.

Extra Large Ovens
Both the oven and the broiler are extra large, not only wide and deep, but they have good height. This is an all important feature and one that will be appreciated by the cook.
